beneficial. If these categories had not been combined under Kirk's and Greenley's "rejection" category, their rejection figure from our study would have appeared as 13.4 percent (based on the incomplete diagnostic category) rather than 57.7 percent.

The above comments are not meant to detract from the importance of the points made by Kirk and Greenley. The significance of studying all aspects of patient care in terms of organizational behavior to better understand the differential influences of organization needs vs. patient needs or patient care cannot be overstressed.

London Calling

I am doing a follow-up study of students of the London School of Economics who received a Social Administration Certificate and Diploma between 1949 and 1973 in the Department of Social Science and Administration. I am trying to contact as many of these former LSE students as possible and hope to begin analyzing the responses in late December 1974. Therefore, I shall be most grateful if any such students will get in touch with me promptly. Please write to Mrs. Kit Russell, Department of Social Science and Administration, London School of Economics, Houghton Street, Aldwych, London WC2A 2AE, England.
